One Hour to Exercise Your POWER

As a business we want to empower you to allow your employees a positive experience when exercising their power to vote. Businesses can create an environment where their employees can learn about candidates and issues, encourage discussion and develop educated voters for the benefit of our community. We challenge you to champion this effort and to embark on a journey of creating power at the polls.

Get Registered

Help educate your employees on how to get registered and show them where they can do it. Offer a "lunch and learn" or presentation on the process and help them feel comfortable with activating their power to vote.

Go Vote

Develop an environment at work where employees feel comfortable to leave to go vote. Have them sign up for a certain time to exercise their vote. If you cannot afford to have everyone out of the office at the same time, have some employees sign up to go "early vote" at the Laramie County Governmental Complex or have them sign up for absentee ballots.

Educate & Communicate

Give employees access to knowing when Town Hall, Debates and Forums are being hosted to encourage them to engage with candidates and ballot issue experts. Also, support office discussion on the employee's experience by having them report back.

One Hour to Exercise Your POWER

As a business it is important for you to educate your employees on how policy, regulation and elected officials may affect their jobs. Give them the chance to be heard and here is how.

THE DO'S

Do encourage education

Create a work environment where they are encouraged to research and learn more about our elected, candidates and special ballot issues, when to vote and even how to vote.

Do embrace engagement

Encourage your employees to actively engage in educational events, debates, forums and expose them to their options.

Do share your insight

Do communicate with your employees on how your business may be affected by proposed policies, regulations and have discussions around these topics.

Do celebrate participation

When an employee is willing to engage in policy making and elections, let them have a voice and encourage them to get involved. The Chamber has a variety of ways for them to participate.

THE DON'TS

Don't tell them how to vote.

You can educate them and provide them opportunities to form their opinions but you can not directly tell your employees how to vote.

Don't make voting a condition of employment.

Providing your employees an opportunity to vote is their right. However, if they choose not to exercise their right to vote, it cannot affect their employment in any way.

Don't offer a bribe.

Do not offer a bribe of money or anything of value to employees to vote a certain way or to vote at all. Ultimately it is their choice.

Don't interfere with an employee's political rights.

Your employee's political rights are outlined in the State of Wyoming Statutes. When in doubt refer to these statutes to guide the way.
